Enhancing Quality of Technology-Enhanced Learning at Jordanian Universities eQtel International Advisory Committee

The advisory committee is formed by a group of experts with a renowned trajectory in leadership positions and research agendas closely related to distance educational contexts with an intensive use of new technologies. The main role of the committee will be to report on the strategic vision on global education and to establishing a road map with recommendation on the future actions of the TEL after having laid its foundations. They can even serve as liaison between the Jordanian TEL centre and similar counterparts in their home institutions and countries of residence in order to build strong ties and set the ground for future collaboration for other related projects.

Likewise, the committee (especially its Jordanian members) will ensure that the activities and conceptualization of the TEL Centre is appropriate for the Jordanian context. The committee will aid in devising the initial road-map of the TEL Centre and will contribute to the centre's objectives suggesting milestones, roles and functions of their members, and future strategy among other issues. The committee is expected to report at least biannually. All these will stem from recommendations of the aforementioned international advisory committee of edtech leadership experts that will be put together during the initial stages as well as contribute and add to the debate that will take place during the project's final conference.

Advisory Committee members:

1. Mark Brown, Director of the National Institute for Digital Learning, Dublin City University
2. Allison Littlejohn, Academic Director of Learning and Teaching, Open University UK
3. Manuel Castro, Vice-director and Academic Affairs Vice-director of the Engineering School, UNED
4. Josep M<sup>a</sup> Duart, Director of the UOC-Unesco Chair in E-Learning and Editor of Revista de Universidad y Sociedad del Conocimiento \(RUSC\), UOC
5. Isam Ayoubi, CEO of The Thinking Company
6. Mohammad Abu Qdais, Arab Open University, Jordan
